Using Less Energy During the Summer Benefits

Your Bank Account and the Environment
As we enter the hot summer months, energy is more expensive and dirtier. By using less energy, you can save money and help the environment! During the peak hours of 4 to 9 pm, energy is predominately generated by fossil fuels in order to meet increased energy demand. You should avoid using major appliances, turn off unnecessary lights, and set your thermostat to 78 degrees or higher. This will save you money and help keep our environment clean.
